GUARD REGIMENTS UNTRUE

Reports of a Conspiracy Against the Emperor Implicate One of the Grand Dukes—Count Witte Considers Telegraphers' Demands—Situation at Sebastopol.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 2.—A prolonged conference was held at the residence of Count Witte to consider the demands of the telegraphers. Count Witte has declined to receive a deputation from the telegraph and postal strikers on the ground that they are violating their duty to the state, but he sent a note to the deputation recommending that the strikers address themselves to their immediate chiefs.

General Baron Moller Gakomelskii, commander of the Seventeenth army corps at Sebastopol, telegraphs as follows: "Armed revolt has ceased. All the troops behaved brilliantly and performed their difficult duty devotedly. The number of prisoners exceeds 2,000. Excitement prevails among the inhabitants, especially among the Jews, whom the revolutionary officers insulted and threatened. The conduct of the Breist regiment in the capture of the marine barracks was irreproachable, as was also the service rendered by the Brestok regiment, the fortress artillery and other troops."

The following dispatch from Vice Admiral Choukmin at Sebastopol has been made public: "The revolutionists counted on a complete success, assuring the sailors and soldiers that they could remain loyal servants of the emperor while presenting their demands, and that it was not necessary for them to use violence. By acting together, they were told they could not fail to succeed. Only the ringleaders were acquainted with the real objects for the putting forth of economic pretenses on service bases, the majority of the men believing that arms would not be employed. The crews on board the ships remained loyal. The including threat of death was used to force the workmen of the port to strike. The tempest of war has ceased but not that of revolution. The Russian people are being led uncomprehendingly into civil war and self-destruction."

REPLY PREPARED

To the Petition of New York Life For a Permanent Injunction.

St. Louis, Dec. 2.—W. D. Vandiver, state superintendent of insurance, who has been temporarily enjoined from executing his order revoking the charter of the New York Life Insurance company because of its contribution of $135,000 to the Republican national campaign fund, will file in the United States district court his answer to the petition for a permanent injunction filed by the company. "We shall contend in our reply," said Mr. Vandiver, "that the United States court has no jurisdiction over this matter, the operations of the New York Life Insurance company in Missouri being solely under the supervision of the state insurance department and subject to the laws of the state."

New York, Dec. 2.—Among the passengers who arrived today on the steamer Princess Irene from Genoa and Naples, were Archbishop Christie of Portland, and Rt. Rev. James Hartley, bishop of Columbus.

PRANK

Of the Practical Joker Scared the Girl and Drove Her To Suicide.

Hillsboro, O., Dec. 2.—Anna Bryant, aged 22, an orphan, employed at the home of F. R. Fletcher, has been adjudged insane and sent to the hospital at Athens, her condition, it is claimed, being due to a fright sustained as the result of a joke by a young man living near her home.

Two weeks ago, it is claimed, Miss Bryant started for church in the evening, and had to pass through a strip of woods to reach the edifice, which was a quarter of a mile from her home. As she was on her way a young man, knowing her intention, secreted himself in a lonely spot and stepped out, making a noise like a wild animal. The poor girl screamed and fell to the ground, where she writhed for a few moments and then made off through the darkness.

She finally reached her employer's home, but has since been demented, and it was feared due to violence to herself or some of her attendants. She refuses to eat or take medicine, and is thought to be hopelessly insane.

DEWEY HASST RESIGNED.

POWERS WARN
THE SULTAN

Two Islands to Be Occupied If Demands Are Not Accepted.

WILL HAVE NO COMPROMISE

Additional Turkish Territory to Be Seized Sunday If the Turk Remains Obdurate—Diplomat Pronounces the Situation Serious—Developments in the Dispute.

Paris, Dec. 2.—A press dispatch from Athens, Greece, says: "A Russian torpedo-boat destroyer arrived here. Her commander said that the Turkish governor of the island of Mytilene presented to Vice Admiral Von Jedina, commander of the international fleet, an official dispatch from Constantinople, in which it was stated that the porte would accept the proposals of the powers for the financial control of Macedonia, with modifications. Admiral Von Jedina replied, according to the Russian officer, that if by Sunday at midday the porte had not definitely accepted the demands, the international fleet would occupy the islands of Lemnos and Imbros."

Discussing the situation a prominent diplomat said: "The people of the United States, even the people of Europe, do not realize the seriousness of the present situation. The tension between the sultan and the powers is growing daily, and the general feeling of uneasiness is increasing, though there is probably no reason for anxiety as far as the safety of foreigners is concerned, especially in the capital. There is no doubt in my mind that the sultan will need on this occasion much squeezing. He may be content enough to see certain islands in the possession of the powers rather than see his hold on the last of his European possessions weakened. Should it be reduced to a question between Turkey and Bulgaria, Roumania or Greece, or between Turkey and all three, Turkey would most assuredly be found spoiling for a fight. She has between 300,000 and 400,000 men in European Turkey today, and could easily and quickly concentrate 600,000 there. Although Bulgaria has a well-drilled and well-equipped army, Turkey's great numerical superiority would count for much. Turkey clearly is eager to fight on this matter with the bordering countries, and every day that passes without witnessing a settlement of the present difficulties makes it increasingly harder for either the sultan or the powers to give in."

Bulgaria's Sharp Reply.

Sofia, Dec. 2.—The Bulgarian foreign minister made a verbal reply to the note presented by Austria and Russia, supported by other powers, warning the governments of the Balkan states to observe neutrality during the naval demonstration against Turkey. The minister expressed surprise that the powers should resort to such an admonition to Bulgaria, which he said had invariably taken a correct position. He said that the existing conditions in European Turkey would continue so long as the Ottoman government connived with the Greeks in the persistent persecution of the Bulgarian population. If the persecutions provoked an outbreak or led to a massacre, the minister said, the Bulgarian government would repudiate all responsibility for the consequences.

FIFTY MILLION DOLLAR MERGER OF CAR BUILDING FACTORIES

Street Car Combine To Include Jewett Plant of Newark About to be Closed in Cincinnati—Pittsburg Man at the Head.

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 2.—The combine of street car building plants, with $50,000,000 capital, which originated in the offices of Thomas Ryan of Philadelphia, and George Kolush of St. Louis, is to be completed in Cincinnati and Randal Morgan of Philadelphia, one of the United Gas Improvement crowd, is to figure in bringing the deal to a successful end, before he leaves tonight. The Jewett car plant of Newark is to be included in the big deal.

Mr. Morgan and W. K. Schoopf are expected home today from an inspection trip which they have been making in the northern part of the state, and it is expected that the transfer of the Cincinnati car company will then be made to the car builders' company. Efforts were made to reach some of the prominent figures in the big traction syndicate, which is involved in the merger, but none of them were in the city, although all are expected to get back home today.

NEW UNION PASSENGER STATION IS TO BE BUILT IN NEWARK

Announcement Not Made by Officials Themselves But It Comes From a Source That Carries Great Weight—Reasons for This Improvement.

Newark will soon have a new union passenger station and freight depot which will be built jointly by the Baltimore and Ohio and the Pennsylvania railroads. Such is the report that became public Saturday from a semi-official source.

A party of Pennsylvania officials visited the city a few days ago and the rumor given above came as a result of their visit. It is known that the company has been dissatisfied with its switching and track facilities for some time, being compelled to use the tracks jointly with the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. The company has also been compelled to depend upon the yard crews of the B. & O. to place cars on the freight depot tracks. The plan which has been suggested is to remove the present passenger station and freight depot and use the space occupied by these buildings for more freight yard room. It is further planned to unite with the B. & O. in building a passenger station.

WEDDING

Did Not Take Place Because the Bride's Mother Refused to "Dig Up" For a License.

Urbana, O., Dec. 2.—A wedding scheduled for Thursday night did not take place. For some time a man named Heathcock, of Mechanicburg, had been keeping company with Mrs. Martha Weaver, of East Lawn avenue, and they decided to get married. Mrs. Weaver prepared a feast and invited many friends to enjoy it.

Heathcock came to town during the day, but he did not have money to get a marriage license. He tried to borrow the money from his prospective brother-in-law, Robert Barnett, but Barnett thought that this was a bad beginning and refused to give up.

JIMMY BRITT

Say Unless He Gets Another Match With Nelson He Will Soon Go To Europe.

Cleveland, O., Dec. 2.—Jimmy Britt, ex-champion lightweight pugilist, made the announcement today that unless he is able to get another match for the championship with Battling Nelson he will sail for Europe about two months hence. Britt says he will be matched in England against Jabob White. He will also give exhibitions of scientific boxing in Europe. He may be abroad a year, he says.

Canada Objected. London, Dec. 2.—Alfred Lyttleton, secretary of state for the colonies, has cabled the colonial governments suggesting the postponement of the colonial conference on the fiscal question until 1907. From the official correspondence it appears that Secretary Lyttleton some time ago proposed to style the conference an "imperial council" and to form therefrom a permanent commission. Cape Colony, Natal and Australia entirely agreed to the proposition, but Canada and New Zealand objected, while New Zealand said it was unable to reply immediately. Mr. Lyttleton thereupon suggested the postponement of the conference.

Says He Killed His Family. Independence, Ia., Dec. 2.—Weakened by the strain to which he was subjected, William S. McWilliams confessed to the murder last week of his wife and five children whose mutilated bodies were found in their home near this place last Friday. McWilliams says that he committed the act because he believed his children had been led astray, and he had no other way of saving them.

That the hale and hearty Harkins could be sick. It was not long after however that the happy face of their old comrade was seen again at the barns and beaming over the front of his car as it sped through the streets. It was then that his absence was explained.

The story as he told it follows: "I have truly been sick. For two years I have been suffering with sore kidneys and backache." "Nothing I heard of or tried afforded me any relief. I was forced to give up my work. I could not get up or down without assistance and was indeed discouraged. I had read so much and heard so often of the marvelous results that were being obtained with the famous Cooper Remedies that as a last resort I tried them."

"I have taken only one bottle of Cooper's New Discovery and feel fine. The soreness and pains in my back and kidneys have entirely disappeared and once more I am quite well. It's a great kidney medicine."

Cooper's New Discovery cures Kidney and Stomach troubles, Blood Diseases, Catarrh, Deafness, Rheumatism and Paralysis and costs only a dollar per bottle. Cooper's Quick Relief, the assistant remedy is sold for fifty cents.

Canada Objected. London, Dec. 2.—Alfred Lyttleton, secretary of state for the colonies, has cabled the colonial governments suggesting the postponement of the colonial conference on the fiscal question until 1907. From the official correspondence it appears that Secretary Lyttleton some time ago proposed to style the conference an "imperial council" and to form therefrom a permanent commission. Cape Colony, Natal and Australia entirely agreed to the proposition, but Canada and New Zealand objected, while New Zealand said it was unable to reply immediately. Mr. Lyttleton thereupon suggested the postponement of the conference.

Says He Killed His Family. Independence, Ia., Dec. 2.—Weakened by the strain to which he was subjected, William S. McWilliams confessed to the murder last week of his wife and five children whose mutilated bodies were found in their home near this place last Friday. McWilliams says that he committed the act because he believed his children had been led astray, and he had no other way of saving them.

That the hale and hearty Harkins could be sick. It was not long after however that the happy face of their old comrade was seen again at the barns and beaming over the front of his car as it sped through the streets. It was then that his absence was explained.

The story as he told it follows: "I have truly been sick. For two years I have been suffering with sore kidneys and backache." "Nothing I heard of or tried afforded me any relief. I was forced to give up my work. I could not get up or down without assistance and was indeed discouraged. I had read so much and heard so often of the marvelous results that were being obtained with the famous Cooper Remedies that as a last resort I tried them."

"I have taken only one bottle of Cooper's New Discovery and feel fine. The soreness and pains in my back and kidneys have entirely disappeared and once more I am quite well. It's a great kidney medicine."

Cooper's New Discovery cures Kidney and Stomach troubles, Blood Diseases, Catarrh, Deafness, Rheumatism and Paralysis and costs only a dollar per bottle. Cooper's Quick Relief, the assistant remedy is sold for fifty cents.

Freight Steamer Founders In Storm That Swept Lake Superior.

NINETEEN PEOPLE PERISHED

Vessel's Life Preservers In Wreckage Sighted Near Michigan Island—Ill-Fated Ship Built at Cleveland and Considered Staunch and Scavorty. Names of the Crew.

Chicago, Dec. 2.—Nineteen men are believed to have perished when the big steel steamer Ira A. Owen foundered in Lake Superior during the great storm. The vessel was last seen about 40 miles off Otter island of the Apostle group, when the gale was at its height. When sighted Tuesday by the steamer H. B. Nye, the Owen was blowing distress signals and seemed in a bad way. The Nye had all she could do to keep aloft herself and could not respond to the signals. Immediately after a blinding snowstorm set in, shutting the disabled boat out from view. When a full came two hours afterward the vessel had disappeared. The next tidings of the Owen were brought into Ashland, Wis., Friday, by Captain M. K. Chamberlain of the steamer Sir William Siemens. Captain Chamberlain reported that at 10 o'clock Thursday, when 12 miles east of Michigan island, he ran into a mass of wreckage, consisting of chairs, stanchions, the top of a cabin and other debris. Floating in the midst of the wreckage were a number of life preservers marked "S. S. Ira H. Owen."

Of the crew, the names of the following are known: Joseph Mulligan, Buffalo, N. Y., captain; Thomas Honner, first mate; M. Haggerty, second mate; H. Buchanan, first engineer; J. B. Alger, second engineer; B. N. Hoke, oiler; J. Jacobson, wheelman; T. Montroy, wheelman; C. McKay, lookout; J. Knudsen, lookout.

When informed of the finding of the wreckage Captain J. G. Keith, the manager of the Owen, reluctantly admitted that all hope was gone. Captain Joseph Mulligan, who commanded the Owen, was a veteran in lake service and was well known at every important lake port. The Owen was built in Cleveland in 1887, and has always been considered especially staunch and seaworthy. She was insured for $100,000. Her cargo of barley was also insured.

SCHEME TO DEFRAUD Charged In Indictments Against a St. Louis Capitalist.

St. Louis, Dec. 2.—Two indictments were returned by the federal grand jury against E. G. Lewis, president of the People's United States bank and publisher of the Woman's Magazine and Woman's Farm Journal. One indictment charged a scheme to defraud in using the mails to induce persons to subscribe for stock and deposit money in the bank. The other charges conspiracy to defraud the government out of large sums of money in postage on the two publications of the Lewis Publishing company. In the latter connection an indictment was also returned against Frank J. Cabot, secretary of the Lewis Publishing company, and William E. Miller, assistant secretary of the People's United States bank.

Vienna, Dec. 2.—A Lemberg dispatch states three revolutionary parties agreed to a warning now being circulated forbidding all Polish residents to pay taxes, the penalty being death. Hundreds of schools throughout Poland have been destroyed by incendiary fires, Russian teachers have been driven out of the country, and Russian books and pictures of the czar have been covered with filth and burned.

Spring Valley, Dec. 2.—To callers at the Mitchell home the statement was made today that the sick man cannot be seen. He is suffering from nervous prostration. Mrs. Mitchell says a few days' rest and quiet with nursing will fully restore him.

MOTORMAN'S LUCK Popular Employee of Allegheny Street Ry. Co., Has a Remarkable and Interesting Experience.

The fellow motorman and friends of the popular J. M. Harkins, 1706 Juniata St., Allegheny, have noted his absence from their midst for some time.

A rumor had been circulated that he was ill and even though he had complained somewhat of late, no one could believe that the hale and hearty Harkins could be sick. It was not long after however that the happy face of their old comrade was seen again at the barns and beaming over the front of his car as it sped through the streets. It was then that his absence was explained.

Deal That is Pending.

A number of important real estate deals are in process of consummation in this city and the coming spring promises a bright outlook in the real estate line. One of the more important changes which is expected to take place soon is the purchase of the Schaus building, now occupied by Barney Byrnes on the north side of the public square, by the Consumers' Brewing company. The purchase has as yet not been announced, but it is understood that it is under consideration. If this deal takes place it is probable that the building will be entirely changed and rebuilt.

A Wonderful Cure.

Bedridden Six Months, I Am Now Doing My Own Housework.

About 15 years ago I was all run down with nervous prostration and palpitation of the heart (often getting black in the face and thought to be dying), losing flesh, till from 130 pounds my weight was reduced to 93 pounds, and for six months I was confined to my bed. A relative of mine who had been troubled with female weakness and nervous prostration and had been cured by Thompson's Barosma, recommended it to me. I began taking Thompson's Barosma at once and was not only cured of nervous prostration and palpitation of the heart, but began to gain in flesh until in a short time I weighed 140 pounds, and from that time on until now have been perfectly well, doing my own housework.—Mrs. Ely Manser, Titusville, Pa. BUCKEYE LAKE ROAD

HEADQUARTERS

Will Not be Removed to Main Street as Rumored—Present Lease Two More Years.

Reports have been circulated to the effect that the Columbus, Buckeye Lake and Newark Traction company was considering the erection of a passenger and freight station in West Main street between Fourth and Fifth streets. General Manager J. R. Harrigan, of the road, was interviewed regarding the report and stated that although the company had observed the concession in the small quarters of their present office, on Saturday night especially, yet they had not given the matter of change of location the slightest consideration, and that the report was without foundation, as the present lease of the company does not expire for two years.

CAPTAIN HAYES

TALKS BASEBALL

Protectives Can't Exist Under Old Conditions—Official Umpires Are Needed.

Zanesville, Dec. 2.—Capt. Hayes, manager of the Newark baseball club, is enthusiastic over the prospects for a league next year and is confident of the outcome of such an organization should it get fairly started. He is already casting about for material for his 1906 Idlewilds and has every confidence that the proposed league will get started all right.

Said Manager Hayes the other evening: "A regularly organized baseball league is just what is most needed and in fact is what is necessary to insure baseball in many minor towns over the state and section. It will be impossible for the old association to exist as it did last year. The utter absence of anything like a complete schedule, the home umpiring, and a thousand features of the old organization sounded its death knell last fall."

Manager Hayes has charge of the Hayes All Star bowling team of Newark. He and his team were in Zanesville Thursday and will be down every other week during the winter.

A BOOK

Is the easiest solution of the "Christmas Problem." No field offers such an infinite variety of holiday gifts. There are few people who would not appreciate the gift of a book. The millionaire banker or your errand boy may be depended upon to be pleased when he finds it is a book that has been given. Come to us, then, when you want something that you know will be the right thing in the right place. We make it our business to search out the best and to offer it at the lowest price. Our business has grown right along each year. People no longer "send off" for books as they used to. They know they will find the good things and at the right price at Edmiston's Book Store. We can only name a few of them here: "The Spirit of Christmas," Dr. Van Dyke's most loving and beautiful expression of the Christmas spirit, only 75c. Our Neighbors, Gibbons' last and best book of drawings, $4.20. Animal Heroes, by Ernest Thompson Seton. His latest, equally enjoyable for old or young, artistically illustrated. The story of the Champions of the Round Table, by Howard Pyle, $2.50. Songs of Cheer, by Riley, one hundred Hoosier pictures; his latest production. The Conquest of Canaan, by Booth Tarkington, $1.50; our price $1.00. The Gambler, by Katherine Cecil Thurston, $1.50; our price $1.00. Queen Zizi of Ix, by I. Frank Baum, a book to make any child happy. Bret Harte, His Letters, handsomely illustrated, in a box, $2.00. Ellen Holsten, with Newark pictures by Clarence White, and hundreds of others, selected with the greatest care. Three words more. DO IT NOW.

RALLY OF GIDEONS

AT ZANESVILLE

M. P. ASHBROOK OF GRANVILLE, IS STATE SECRETARY OF ORGANIZATION.

Object is to Recognize Christian Traveling Men With Cordial Fellowship.

Zanesville, Dec. 2.—Tonight and Sunday will bring forth red letter events in the history of the Gideons in this city. They will be caused by the holding of a rally here which promises to be the largest gathering of Gideons ever held in Zanesville. Charles H. Palmer of Chicago, national field superintendent, and M. P. Ashbrook, of Granville, state secretary, will be in attendance. A. B. Skipton of Zanesville is state president of this society.

The object of the Gideons is to recognize the Christian commercial traveling men of the world with cordial fellowship, to encourage one another in the Master's work; to improve every opportunity for the betterment of the lives of fellow travelers, business men and others with whom they may come in contact, scattering seeds all along the pathway for Christ.

Any of the following may become members of the organization. Any man whose chief occupation is traveling for business, who believes in Jesus Christ his personal Savior, and endeavors to follow Him in his daily life, and who has belonged for three months or longer to some local church that makes such belief and endeavor a condition of membership, may become a Gideon by complying with the bylaws governing applications.

Since the organization of the Gideons some time ago, the membership has increased wonderfully, and today the Gideons stand out as being one of the strongest organizations of commercial traveling men.

CHRISTMAS BIRTH MONTHLY.

When the 1904 Christmas number of this magazine was issued, the critics said it was impossible for the publishers to get out a finer number but we believe that the Christmas 1905 number, which is now on all news stands, is very much more attractive than Christmas numbers of previous years. The cover is an exquisite design in five colors and gold, the frontispiece, The Falconer, by a celebrated European artist, also being in five colors. The form of portraits, containing such celebrities as Padreski, Gen. F. D. Grant, Lillian Russell and Mrs. Geo. J. Gould, Maxine Elliott, Cecilia Loftus and others, is printed on the somewhat rare India tint paper in an exquisite tone of sepia. A departure is made from previous numbers in the publication of a pleasing story by Ethel Watts Mumford. Among the "Men and Women of Note" are Andrew Carnegie, Miss Alice Roosevelt, Adeline Patte and her husband, Emperor William and Hon. Elihu Grison, our Minister to Japan who displayed very clever diplomacy in the recent trying position in which he was placed. This issue is a double number and sells at 50 cents a copy. It is well worth double the amount.

Clerk of the Senate.

In view of the Democratic responsibility that will come in the organization of the Senate, there is special importance attached to the election of the clerk of that body. A man of experience and thorough parliamentary knowledge is needed for the position and this consideration should control in the selection that is to be made. We are glad to note that the name of Col. W. A. Taylor is mentioned for the position, for he is a skilled veteran in all the requirements. His knowledge of parliamentary law, familiarity with legislative rules and regulations and intimate acquaintance with the affairs of the State are especial qualifications that would make Col. Taylor an ideal clerk of the Senate. His election would be commended by Democrats all over the State, and it would be a proper recognition of his invaluable services throughout the recent campaign.

Porto Rico's people are appealing for a larger share in their own government. They assert that in some respects they are given less liberty than they enjoyed under Spanish rule. Then they sent several members to the Spanish cortes and had their own legislature. Now, while they elect members of the lower house of the island legislature, the upper one, or executive council, is not under their control. They also have but one delegate to our Congress. The people of Porto Rico have certainly conducted themselves in such a manner as to deserve careful consideration of any request they may unite in making to Congress.

The Russian Crisis.

Owing to the interruption of telegraphic and cable communication it is difficult to judge of the situation at Sebastopol and in Russia generally at this moment. Such reports as have come from Sebastopol agree in declaring that the mutineers were beaten, but whether the trouble has been ended and peace entirely restored to the port is still at this writing unknown. The interruption of telegraphic communications between St. Petersburg and the rest of the empire generally has made the task of the central government additionally difficult.

The occurrences at Sebastopol are liable to encourage the friends of autocracy to demand a return to the old methods of force and repression. Certainly many of the radical advocates of progress are affording the excuse for such a demand. They are insisting upon reforms being immediately accomplished, for which both the time and the opportunity are lacking. The program already outlined by Count Witte is a large and important one and its carrying into effect would register a great advance. But he is hampered by constant turmoil, and by the refusal of assistance from many who should aid him.

Unless there can be a reasonable degree of order restored and a popular condemnation of the disorders of the radicals and the rough elements secured, a most deplorable condition of affairs is likely to result. The exhibition of patriotism and patience and common sense by the intelligent people of the country will be required to tide Russia over the present crisis without either anarchy or autocracy temporarily getting the upper hand.

Columbus lets it be known that as a city it will do the handsome thing on the occasion of the inauguration of John M. Pattison as governor. It there's a day that Columbus looks forward to with anticipation it's the day on which a governor takes office.

Professor Percival Lowell has come to the conclusion that the canals on the planet Mars are artificial. He would greatly oblige administration circles in Washington just as congress is about to assemble if he would determine whether the canals are constructed with locks or on a sea level.

Some of Germany's lawmakers indulged in an interesting debate recently over the high prices of meats, from which it appears that the restrictions put upon the importation of American cattle and hog products are not working any too satisfactorily. The debate was opportune at this time, inasmuch as the subject of modifying our trade relations with Germany is now to the front. There is no doubt a much larger field in Germany for our meats than we have been able to occupy. But it will not be opened to us as long as our standards persist in keeping up the unnecessarily high barrier against the entry of German goods into this country.

BLIND MAN DISCOVERED FIRE AND SAVED FAMILY AND MONEY BOX.

Newark People at Norwich—Captain Pugh Dead—Geo. Bell Falls Under Train.

Zanesville, Dec. 2.—William Harris, a blind man, discovered a fire in the residence of Rix Mills, yesterday, saved the family from burning by waking them up, and also rescued a money box containing $200 from the flames.

Harris was awakened by the odor of smoke and cracking of the flames. He then started the alarm, felt his way to a cupboard, secured the money box and got out of the building unharmed. The house was totally destroyed.

EIGHT ACRES

North of Newark Have Been Bought by Joseph F. Smith for the Sum of $2400.

Mr. Jos. F. Smith of the firm of Smith Brothers, grocers, of this city, has purchased eight acres off the Bruce Stewart farm adjoining the Wilson farm, on the Mt. Vernon road, just at the corporate limits of the city. This is one of the most desirable and valuable pieces of land in the vicinity of Newark. It has a frontage of 600 feet on the Mt. Vernon road. At present Mr. Smith is undecided what he will do with the property. The consideration was $300 an acre.

BRICK PAVEMENT

On Walnut Street Between First and Fourth Just Completed by Contractor W. S. Pace.

The brick pavement on Walnut street, between First and Fourth streets, which has been put down by the Pennsylvania railroad company, has just been completed. The work has been done by Contractor Pace, who has built a number of Newark's best streets, and the work is up to the usual standard of excellence.

Perhaps no improvement by either of the railroads entering Newark has done more to better the conditions for their property or for the benefit of the city, than this pavement. This street has always been an eyesore to the community and especially to the traveling public. The street now presents a handsome appearance and places the entrance to the passenger and freight stations in a much better condition.

INAUGURATION CEREMONIES

OF OHIO'S NEW GOVERNOR TO BE IN ACCORD WITH STATE PRIDE.

Reforms of the Cox Municipal Code to be Subject for the New Legislature.

Columbus, Dec. 2.—It is settled that the ceremonies attending the inauguration of Governor John M. Pattison next month will be in harmony with the importance of the event and in accord with the state pride of the people of Ohio, but the details will not be fully worked out in less than a week or ten days. The celebration is in the hands of the Columbus board of trade, consulting with the Democratic state executive committee and Mr. Pattison. There will be a big parade, civic and military. All of the leading Democratic clubs of the state are expected to be in line, with the Duckworth club of Cincinnati, 300 strong, of which Mr. Pattison is a member, leading the van. A new Democratic club in Columbus is now being organized and will make its first public appearance on this occasion. Cleveland will send a big delegation, other remote cities will be well represented and it is expected that the Democracy of central Ohio will turn out en masse. Governor Herrick and Governor-elect Pattison will occupy the first carriage in the parade. The inaugural ceremonies will be held in the rotunda of the state capitol, in the presence of the supreme court, state officers and both houses of the legislature. Governor and Mrs. Pattison will give a public reception in the evening, but further than the foregoing the program of the day is incomplete. It is possible that the new Franklin County Memorial auditorium on East Broad street will be dedicated on this occasion with a grand inaugural ball, or that the reception will be held there. Mr. Pattison will ultimately decide that question. But in any event the inauguration will be a spectacular and social event to be long remembered, and after the festivities are over the Democracy will settle down in more sober-minded fashion, to run things in this state for what now promises to be an indefinite period.

How and where the next governor will live while a resident of Columbus is another question for early determination. The governor of Ohio, unfortunately, has no official residence, and he must make his home in Columbus during his term at great inconvenience and expense. The latter was a sore trial to Governor McKinley, and if Governor Nash had not owned a modest home here he would have been bankrupted by the financial pressure of his office on his private purse. After many attempts to provide for a governor's mansion at the state capital, the last general assembly authorized its construction and appropriated $80,000 for the purpose. His extravagance in other directions, however, required Governor Herrick to veto the bill in order to save the treasury from a deficit, and so it happens that Governor Pattison must go house-hunting like his predecessor or take apartments in an hotel.

Governor Herrick since election has been making his home at the Hotel Hartman, and there is some talk that Governor Pattison will do likewise. All this, however, is "up in the air" for the present. Meanwhile the only "sure thing" about the situation is the fact that Ohio is disgraced by her failure to provide her chief executive with a place to lay his head. Under existing circumstances a rich governor is likely to "go broke" and one of moderate means to go to the infirmary.

It is known that another object which Governor-elect Pattison has clearly in view, and which will be among the earliest reforms brought before the legislature, is the amendment of the Cox code so as to abate the evil of board government in municipalities. Ambitious citizens who are looking to the future for fat positions on the municipal boards created by Republican legislators might as well spare their zeal and save their wind to run for something else, for within the next few months the present oppressive system of municipal government in this state will be greatly modified. In this effort Governor Pattison will have the unanimous support, regardless of party, of the legislative delegations in both houses from Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus and Toledo. The Democrats are pledged to this reform, and the Republicans, who made it necessary, are afraid to vote against it in view of the present state of public sentiment.

It is understood that Mr. Pattison favors the transaction by the legislature of the greatest possible amount of business in the shortest possible time. There will be fewer long adjournments than formerly and more sessions that look something like a day's work. In a word, the people of Ohio are "up against" a business administration, instead of a protechnic display of politics.

CAPT. ROUDEBUSH IS DISQUALIFIED

DR. COLWELL OF DENISON ATHLETIC BOARD TAKES ACTION ON NEW EVIDENCE.

Refuses to Further Discuss Question. Roubush Has Played in But One Game This Year.

Granville, O., Dec. 2.—Dr. R. S. Colwell, chairman of Denison's athletic board, announced last night that he had disqualified Quarterback Roubush who captained Denison's football team for 1905. He stated that his action was taken after learning of new evidence in the case which developed during the past few days. Further than making that statement, Dr. Colwell refused to talk on the subject.

Captain Roubush, who has played with the Denison team for four years, has always been a bright star in the games in which he took part. He came to Denison and entered school before the close of the college year to play baseball, where he has always been a mainstay.

This year Captain Roubush was one of the strongest men back of the line and directed the movements of the team like a veteran that he is. Besides the game at the opening of the season "Roudy" has played in but one game this season, that with the Case school at Cleveland. It was in this game that he was compelled to retire on account of the serious injuries sustained. A number of ligaments were torn loose in his shoulder.

A. BONHAM FOUND COLD IN DEATH

FATHER OF NEWARK MAN MEETS HIS DEATH ON THE HIGHWAY.

R. Bonham of North Fourth Street, Attended Funeral Services Friday Afternoon.

Found cold in death at the side of the highway was the tragic end of Alexander Bonham, aged 67, a well known farmer of the West Carlisle neighborhood—a fate that overtook him on the eve of Thanksgiving.

Noah Ashcraft was driving home Wednesday evening, when about two miles west of West Carlisle, he was startled to find the body of a man prone in the highway. He alighted and found the body to be that of Alex. Bonham, and cold in death, probably due to heart failure.

Mr. Bonham dwelt in West Carlisle for many years, but of recent years his wife has been dwelling in Newark with a son, keeping a boarding house, domestic troubles having split the family. An only daughter, Mrs. Miller, dwells in West Carlisle.

The funeral services were held at the Presbyterian church at West Carlisle Friday afternoon and interment made there.—Coshocton Age.

Mr. R. Bonham, who conducts the boarding house at No. 50 North Fourth street, is a son of the deceased. He attended the funeral, which took place on Friday afternoon.

HER PHYSICIANS DESPAIRED. ADVISED CHANGE OF CLIMATE.

Pe-ru-na, Used as a Last Resort, Cured Her of a Severe Attack of Catarrh of the Lungs.

MRS. IDA CALDWELL.

The Sensational Cure of Mrs. Caldwell Is the Talk of Her Acquaintances.

Mrs. Ida Caldwell, 506 Pearl street, Sioux City, Ia., Vice-President Order of Washington, writes:

"I suffered with catarrh of the respiratory organs off and on for the last three years until I thought it was chronic. My chest and lungs were irritated and I had to use the greatest care not to expose myself to chilly air or dampness as it increased my troubles.

"My physician advised me to try a change of climate, but I was unable to leave my family. Reading of the wonderful cures performed by Peruna, I bought a bottle.

"It was with the greatest satisfaction that I found it the one medicine among them all which cured me. I was relieved within three days and after two months and a half the irritation was gone, my lungs perfectly healed and my health restored."—Ida Caldwell.

Thousands of women owe their lives to Peruna. Hundreds of thousands owe their health to Peruna. Hundreds of thousands are praising Peruna in every state of the Union.

We have many thousands of letters from grateful women, with permission to use them in public print, which can never be used for want of space.

Catarrh would not be such a curse in this country if the people thoroughly understood its nature. It must be treated at once to prevent it from making inroads upon vital organs.

If you suffer from catarrh, buy Peruna today, for a day gained on the enemy, catarrh, means a day nearer recovery.

We have on file many thousand testimonials like the one given here. We can only give our readers a slight glimpse of the vast array of unsolicited endorsements we are receiving. No other physician in the world has received such a volume of enthusiastic letters of thanks as Dr. Hartman for Peruna.

A UNIQUE RECORD.

To give positive home testimony in every locality is of itself unanswerable proof of merit; but when we add to this the continued endorsement from people who testified years ago no evidence can be stronger. A Newark citizen gratefully acknowledges the good received from Doan's Kidney Pills and when time has tested the cure we find the same hearty endorsement, with added enthusiasm and continued praise. Cases of this kind are plentiful in the work of Doan's Kidney Pills, and such a record is unique in the annals of medicine.

E. Frank Edwards, plasterer, of 152 Ash St., Newark, O., says: "I had backache and had it bad. For several years I was suffering from sharp shooting pains in the region of the kidneys and a dull aching and weakness in the back which was becoming very serious. I tried remedy after remedy without finding relief and I nearly lost hope when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, obtained at Crayton's drug store. It was a gratifying surprise to find after a few doses of this remedy the pain seemed somewhat abated and I continued the treatment for some little time, using several boxes. I was thoroughly cured. I gave a testimonial at that time recommending Doan's Kidney Pills to others. It is now eight years since I made that statement, and I am glad to be able to say that the cure was permanent."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

A. O. U. W. DANCE.

Golden Rod Lodge A. O. U. W. will give a select dance at the hall, South Park Place, Monday evening, Dec. 11. Five hundred invitations have been issued to the dancers of the city and arrangements are being made to make this one of the most successful social events of the season. It is expected that nearly all who receive invitations will attend, as the dance being strictly private and the music furnished by Marshall's orchestra assures a good time.

In some parts of Hungary scrofula of the old Russian type still prevails. The present is obliged to work fifty days each year for his landlord without pay, the time to be chosen by the landlord, who is almost sure to choose a season when the poor man can hardly afford to work for nothing. This led to the insurrection in 1904.

LATE WIRE TICKS

Advocate Telegrams Containing Important News Are Condensed to a Few Lines.

Berlin, Dec. 2.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Zeitung, which yesterday published the rumor that the czar had been shot at and wounded, today reasserts the report and declares the perpetrator of the outrage was the czar's cousin, Demeterious Constantinovich.

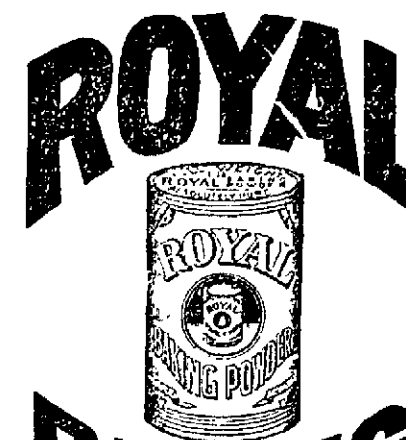

New York, Dec. 2.—The Commercial Cable company, this morning compelled to issue a notice that the cable to St. Petersburg was again interrupted.

London, Dec. 2.—A number of lives are believed to have been lost as the result of a collision between steamers or Dungeness this morning. The British steamer Phillipville collided with an unknown steamer and the latter went to the bottom in a few minutes. Seven persons were rescued. A dense fog prevailed. It is possible the missing people are in boats or clinging to the wreckage.

Chicago, Dec. 2.—Officers of the Pacific Underwriting Trust company, claiming headquarters in San Francisco, were raided by detectives this morning. B. C. Talmadge was arrested charged with working a confidence game. Miss A. E. Biele, representing the Rock Springs Coal company, Sioux City, Iowa, Miss Frances Mason sister of Ex-senator Mason and several others were the complaining witnesses. It is alleged Talmadge offered to finance companies needing money for development and took a fee for preliminary expenses. The police declare the operations of the company have extended all over the country and say twelve other concerns will be raided.

New York, Dec. 2.—By the canvass and recount of votes in four election districts made last night before Justice Amund, Hearst made a conceded gain over McClellan of 17 votes. Many ballots were found counted for McClellan which should have been declared void because of improper markings. Should the same proportion of errors in the count be found in other districts Hearst would be elected by a nice plurality. The Hearst forces are jubilant.

WEDDINGS.

MYERS-KENDALL.

Mr. Robert Lee Myers, a molder at the Wehrle foundry, and Miss Anna Pearl Kendall, a well known young woman of this city, were married on Wednesday evening. The ceremony was performed by Squire Lee S. Lake at his residence, 70 Cedar street. The newly married couple will reside on North street. They have the congratulations of all their friends.

SHRIDER-PATTON.

The beautiful country home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Patton, near Homer was the scene of a pretty wedding on Wednesday evening, when their only daughter, Miss Hazel Ruth Patton, was united in marriage to Mr. Guy S. Shriver, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Shriver, of Hudson avenue.

Promptly at 7 o'clock to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Mrs. George Loar, the bridal party descended the stairs. First came the graceful little ribbon bearers, Misses Anetie Patton and Florence Edman, dainty in gowns of mousseline. Next came the officiating clergyman, Rev. Boyd Gay, of the Presbyterian church of Utica. The groom and the best man, Mr. Clifford Patton, the bride's brother, entered the parlor, followed by the maid of honor, Miss Blanche Butcher, and the bride. The bridal party stood in front of a bank of palms and ferns, and it was here the ceremony was performed by Rev. Boyd Gay.

The bride was a vision of loveliness in an exquisite gown of white tulle and silk, and carrying a bouquet of valley lilies. The maid of honor was charming in a gown of silk and carried white chrysanthemums. The color scheme was green and white, and was effectively carried out in all the decorations. The mantels were banked with palms and ferns, the chandeliers festooned with smilax, and large bowls of chrysanthemums were in evidence throughout all the rooms. After congratulations an elaborate wedding supper was served.

The bride's table was beautiful, the centerpiece being formed of white carnations and chrysanthemums intermingled with smilax. Seated at the bride's table were Mr. and Mrs. Gay.

COPELAND-BRIDGELAND.

A neatly appointed home wedding took place Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Bridgeland, 24 Allen street, the Rev. Lester S. Boyce officiating, when Mr. Frank B. Copeland and Miss Lillian Bridgeland were united in wedlock. Mr. Copeland is the son of Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Copeland of Mansfield, O., and is employed as an electrician in Columbus. Miss Bridgeland is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Bridgeland, of Bellaire, O. After a brief trip they will make their home in Columbus.

BARR-MCFARLAND.

Mr. Frank H. Barr, a well known employe of the Wehrle Stove Works, this city, and Mrs. Mary McFarland, daughter of Mr. D. T. Francis, of Black Hand, were married on Friday evening. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. L. C. Sparks at his residence on North Fifth street. Mr. and Mrs. Barr have the best wishes of their friends.

Frank Moore, of this city, has commenced suit in the Common Pleas court against Austin G. Ashbrook and Mary Ashbrook of this city and Professor Willoughby Miller of Berlin, Germany, for $950.

Plaintiff says that in October 1903, he loaned Austin C. Ashbrook, who had been in the wholesale grocery business in this city, $1200, and took his note for the same; that in September of 1904, the defendants fraudulently obtained possession of the $1200 note from the plaintiff by paying him $372, and giving him a written promise to pay him the balance in a few days; that after obtaining the $1200 note from plaintiff the defendant, A. G. Ashbrook, with the purpose and intent of defrauding plaintiff, conveyed the home property in which he resided on Second street to his wife without consideration, and in fraud of plaintiff's rights. The petition charges that Ashbrook and his wife and Professor Miller conspired together to defraud the creditors of A. G. Ashbrook, and that the deed from Ashbrook to his wife and a mortgage for $2000 given by the Ashbrooks to Prof. Miller was without consideration, and was done for the purpose of defrauding the creditors. The petition asks for judgment in plaintiff's favor, and that the alleged fraudulent deed and fraudulent mortgage be set aside, and for the sale of the real estate to satisfy plaintiff's claim. G. C. Daugherty, attorney for the plaintiff.

Savings Bank Case.

In the case of the American Liquidation company vs. the stockholders of the Newark Savings Bank company, plaintiff has dismissed its second cause of action to the petition for the reason that about all the unpaid subscription has been paid by the stockholders. The first cause of action to enforce the double liability remains to be contested. Collier, Norpell, Sater, Hunter & Hunter, Black, J. B. Jones, Webb and Hilliard.

SCIENCE PREVENTS BALDNESS.

The Fatal Germ and Its Remedy Now Facts of Science.

It is the rarest thing in the world for a man to be necessarily bald. No man whose hair is not dead at the roots, need be bald if he will use Newcomb's Herpicide, the new scalp antiseptic. Herpicide destroys the germ that cuts the hair off at the root, and cleans the scalp of dandruff and leaves it in a perfectly healthy condition. Mr. Bennett, in the Maryland Block, Butte, Mont., was entirely bald. In less than a month Herpicide had removed the germ of his hair, and nature did its work by covering his head with thick hair in a few days, and in six weeks he had a normal suit of hair. MACHINE AT NEWARK GOLD MINE GIVEN SATISFACTORY TEST RUN

Several Tons of Earth Run Through the Apparatus Showing
$1.63 Per Ton Which is Very Satisfactory to Company.

The directors and stockholders of the Licking Mining company, together with a number of interested spectators witnessed the trial run of the newly installed machinery, at the company's mine southeast of the city this week. The new machinery proved a success beyond doubt and all of those who witnessed the run were enthusiastic in their praise of its operation and in the bright prospects of the company.

The directors present were, J. D. Corwin, president, of Waverly, O.; Edward J. Miller, vice president, of Columbus; J. E. Stoltz, general manager, of Osborn, O.; Fred Lisey, J. E. Stinger and the company's attorney S. L. James, all of this city, also the work manager, Mr. Killhifer of Los Angeles, Cal., who is an expert miner, being a graduate of O. S. U.

Only surface earth was used in these runs and several tons were put through the machine, the total average of which equaled about $1.63 per ton, which is considered an excellent value even in the western states. In some of the western mining country of the very best condition an average of fifty cents per ton is considered good indeed. A great amount of waste could not be accounted in making up the average of these runs, owing to the fact that this company has not yet received the facilities for handling what is known as the "tailings" or waste. It is claimed that byproducts will pay for the running of the mine.

A great amount of enthusiasm was displayed by those who witnessed the first run, which showed such great possibilities. There has for sometime been a great amount of doubt expressed as to whether or not the gold which was known to be in this locality, was in sufficient quantity to pay for its mining, but it has been fully proven, that the gold is in the earth and in a quantity which was never dreamed of, even by those who are backing the new mine. With the use of modern mining methods the great possibilities of the proposition can scarcely be imagined. In the coming spring, the company proposes placing an immense hoisting dredge upon the property to facilitate the work.

This mine was discovered first, about thirty-five years ago by an old prospector who had spent some years in the gold fields of California, and who was considered an expert, and, who discovered underlying this large tract of land, rich deposits of gold, but, being without sufficient capital, and lack of influence to enable him to properly develop it, he built a small crude sluice way, and took out considerable gold, disposing of it from time to time, to jewelers and dentists in this city, and sending the remainder to the Philadelphia mint to be coined. This he continued until the time of his death, and this land was undeveloped during all the intervening years until February, 1904, when J. E. Stinger, then in the manufacturing jewelry business in this city, together with a mining expert from the Alaska gold fields, went upon the ground, testing the entire tract, with the present result.

Mr. J. E. Stoltz who contracted with the company, to place machinery for the purpose of testing the mine, has been complimented by the board of directors for the apt and thorough manner in which he has proven the property.

It is quite evident that the development of this valuable field of gold will mean a great deal to the city of Newark, in the way of furthering manufacturing interests and attracting attention in commercial lines.

Work will be pushed in the coming spring in the working of the new mine and it is highly probable that within a very short time the mine will be in full operation.

It is of interest to learn that there is a market for every product and its location makes its shipping facilities great.

MUCH BUILDING COMING YEAR

Two Skyscrapers, Big Apartment House, Factory Buildings,
Dwellings, Skating Rink and Probably Union
Passenger Station to be Built.

More building will be done in Newark the coming season than for many years, notwithstanding the fact that for the past several years from three to five hundred houses have been built here each year.

From the present outlook, the season will be the best in Newark's history.

As already told a few days ago, the Newark Trust company will erect a ten-story block—Newark's first skyscraper—on the site where Elliott & Wilson's hardware store and Evans barber shop now stands at the northwest corner of the public square and as told recently Chilcote and Jones will build on their newly acquired property on Fourth street, being the Rank livery stable and residence property, only the block they will build will be six stories instead of three or four as first contemplated. An addition is being made to the Everett glass factory. Bailey & Keeley are beginning the construction of their new block on West Main street where Dr. Larimore lived for years and it is probable that the Barney Byrnes block owned by L. P. Schaus will pass into new hands soon and be reconstructed. It is known too that the old Franklin bank building will be remodeled and made an up-to-date business room. Now comes the rumor from an authentic source that the B. & O. and Panhandle railways will join in the erection of a union depot.

The newly incorporated company known as the Sherwood Improvement company, will begin the erection of their new "Sherwood" block, on the Southeast corner of East Main and First street.

Contractor Woolway is putting the finishing touches to the fine three story apartment house for Engineer Briggs at the corner of Fifth and Church and the fine three story apartment house owned by Dr. J. T. Lewis on Locust street was recently finished.

Work is starting on a new skating rink on Fourth street near the canal and many dwellings in all parts of town are under construction. Many more will go up in the spring.

Messrs. John A. Chilcote and Ben B. Jones who recently purchased the property in North Fourth street now occupied by the Bradley and Graef livery stable, and which extends from the alley to the Union block on Fourth and to the alley joining Church and West Main, in the near, have announced their intentions of erecting a thoroughly modern, steel, six story building on this property.

The new building will extend for a feet on Fourth, with a depth of 120 feet, and will be built between the Union block and the Bradley and Graef stable. The new building will be fitted with thoroughly modern apartments two elevators will be used to convey freight and passengers. The building will be heated by steam while electricity and gas will furnish the light. The ground floor of the structure will be used for business purposes.

The building occupied by Bradley & Graef will be reconstructed, making a three story structure and will be used in the same manner as the larger building, the first floor being turned into business rooms and the second and third used as living apartments.

The excavation for the work will begin at once in order that as much as possible may be gained before the severe winter weather, later, possibly by March, the erection of the new buildings will begin.

DISMISSAL

For Breaking the Rules Recommended in Meriwether's Case—He is Not Guilty.

New York, Dec. 2.—A Washington dispatch says:

Minor Meriwether, Jr., the young cadet midshipman, who was tried by a courtmartial for the alleged killing of his classmate, Midshipman James R. Brainer, during a fist fight in the Annapolis naval academy, has been acquitted of the charge of manslaughter by the court, and has been adjudged guilty of the charges of a breach of rules in fighting with Branch, and the minor breaches there were collateral to the main issue.

The court recommends his dismissal from the service for infraction of discipline. The court came to its decision Friday and ordered the decision transmitted to Secretary of the Navy Charles J. Bonaparte.

As Mr. Bonaparte is out of the city the findings were not delivered. None of those connected with the case would divulge the nature of the findings, but it was stated unauthoritatively that they were as told above.

POULTRY SHOW DECEMBER 26-30

SUCCESS OF ANNUAL EXHIBIT
IN THIS CITY IS NOW ASSURED.

Armory in East Main Street Has Been Secured—Officers Make Announcement.

The success of the coming poultry exhibit to be held in this city December 26 to 29, 1905, is assured. Secretary Larason has completed all arrangements for the greatest gathering of fine birds ever held in Newark. The armory on East Main street has been secured for the entire week which will be an ideal location and the room is spacious and well heated and lighted. S. B. Lane, an expert judge of Spiceland, Ind., will do the scoring. A large catalogue has been compiled which is now in the hands of the printer, will be ready for distribution about December 10, 1905, and will be mailed to every known breeder of pure bred poultry in Ohio. Letters of inquiry are already pouring in and many are declaring their intention of making elaborate exhibits, from other counties. A large amount of illustrated advertising matter has been contracted for and will soon be ready for distribution, thus insuring a large attendance. The Prairie State Incubator and Brooder company of Horner City, Pa., has requested floor space for a large exhibit and the same has been granted. Chicks will likely be hatched during the progress of the show. Several other companies have been invited. A great auction sale of pure bred birds on exhibition will be held Saturday, December 30, at 2 p. m. in the hall. About $125 in special prizes has been donated and evenly distributed over the various breeds, which, in addition to the liberal cash premiums will make it very interesting for the exhibitors. All poultry will be cooped in neat and attractive cages and every detail will be carefully looked after by the management.

The competition among the exhibitors will be "hot." Some good birds are already dropping into the city and county, and old Licking expects to get her share of honors, while the prize winners from abroad will no doubt make it very interesting. The exhibition will be open evenings. Plan to attend.

W. F. Seymour is president, and E. M. Larason is secretary of the association.

Mr. Bowser Gets a Scare

Thinks He Has Taken Laudanum In Place of a Cough Remedy and Rushes to Druggist.

STARTLES THE VILLAGE

After Rousing the Pharmacist For an Antidote It Is Found He Took a Celebrated Cure.

THE evening had been a pleasant one with the Bowsers, but just as they were ready to go to bed Mr. Bowser felt a touch of sore throat and announced:

"I got my feet wet yesterday, and probably took cold. I think I'll take a pretty big dose of that cough syrup of mine and head it off. I suppose it's in the medicine chest on the shelf?"

"Yes, I saw it there the other day," replied Mrs. Bowser, "but you've got so many bottles there you must be careful. Better bring it upstairs when you have found it."

When she had gone upstairs, Mr. Bowser brought the chest down from the top shelf of the closet and looked it over. It was not long before he lighted on the celebrated "Cure a Cold in Ten Seconds," recommended to him six months before by a traveling doctor and put up by his family druggist, and, elevating the bottle, he took a hearty swig of the contents. He carried upstairs with him a pleasant feeling that his cold had been knocked into the middle of last week, and nothing interrupted that feeling until he was in bed and sleep stealing over him and Mrs. Bowser said:

"I hope you made no mistake about that bottle."

"How could I make a mistake?" he asked in a dreamy way.

"Easy enough. You are very absent-minded. Don't you remember once taking a tablespoonful of sewing machine oil in place of a tonic?"

A doubt entered his mind, and he sat up. Two more doubts followed the first, and he got out of bed.

"What is it?" asked Mrs. Bowser.

"I've got to go down and see about that infernal old bottle. I know it isn't possible that I got hold of the wrong stuff, but you've had to mix in and make me wonder about it. I can almost imagine I feel a strange taste in my mouth."

He growled to himself as he pulled on his trousers and started downstairs. The chest was on the stand where he had left it, and as he lighted the gas the cat rolled off the lounge and stared at him in surprise.

"It was the right bottle, of course," he mused, "and what a fool I was to hop out of bed and trot down here! Here the blamed thing is, and if it doesn't say 'Cough Syrup' on the label then I'm a seer."

But it didn't. As he held the bottle up to the light a picture of a skull and crossbones greeted his eyes, and across the label ran the word "Laudanum." Mrs. Bowser heard a whoop and a rush, and the next minute Mr. Bowser dashed into the room, with the cat at his heels.

"What on earth is it?" she asked as he began to gather up and pull on his socks and shoes.

"I-I've taken poison—Laudanum!" he gasped as his teeth chattered and his eyes bulged out.

"Then go at once to the drug store for a remedy. How careless of you! Here is your vest; here's your coat. If you have taken Laudanum, you must throw it off at once and then drink a lot of strong coffee."

"Do you—do you think I'm a dead man?" he stammered as he got into his coat.

"Don't stop to ask a single question, but fly for your life, and I'll go down and get the coffee ready."

"I-I can't make it out. Don't wait here a minute longer."

My Rights In Regard to Hallie

By INA WRIGHT HANSON

Copyright, 1905, by Ruby Douglas

It is not etiquette in Grass Valley to make afternoon calls earlier than 6 o'clock on certain days of the year. The weather man made the rule. When the mercury stand: at 102 degrees on the shady north porch and you are sure that something ails the thermometer or it would be higher, you obey fashion's dictates without any question.

It was something after 6 when I joined Hallie at her aunt's gate on the evening before she was to return to her eastern home. She was bareheaded, bare necked, bare armed, and her dress was white. My throat tightened as I saw in perspective other nights when I shouldn't care what I did because I thought, beautiful Hallie would be only a memory.

"I've saved only the best for the last, Dan," she smiled, giving her hand. "Come on the porch and see. Every day I've stood here and looked over at it, my beautiful castle, and would allow no one to tell me about it because I wanted you to. I've made more romances about that castle than you can count."

"Castle?" I repeated, following her to the east porch. "I don't know of any castle in this town."

In obedience to her pointing finger I looked across the hollow to the hill beyond, red of soil and green with cultivation, having a background of pines and bearing on its breast ruins of gray stone.

"Oh, that," I said; "that is Deacon's Folly. It is!"

"Wait. Don't tell me till we are there. We shall see the sun go down while I listen to the story."

So we went through the streets of the town out into a country road and through a veritable lovers' lane, with the twitter of birds somewhere beyond the willows on either side, with the

"I thought of the time Hallie had shown me her castle from the east porch, and my heart was like lead as I went round the house and looked up to see—Hallie! Not round and rosy as she had been, but white, with great eyes unnaturally bright; Hallie, with her pale lips trembling and her thin little arms outstretched toward me.

"What have they done to my darling?" I cried hoarsely as I sprang forward.

"I'm tired, Dan," she whispered, laying her dear head on my shoulder. "You said no one could serve two masters, and I have failed in serving one. I went out one stormy night to get details of a horrible murder case. I caught cold and couldn't seem to get over it. They said I must come back to California. And, Dan, I was glad, for California held you. My castle has fallen, as you said it might, but I don't seem to care."

"Hallie," I answered joyously, "love is better than fame and quietness far more to be desired than great riches. After you left I bought the pear orchard, and often have I sat among the castle ruins longing for my little girl. Tomorrow I will begin to build our house, and when it is finished I shall take you there. The pure winds and the balm of the pines will give you back your health. Oh, Hallie, Hallie!"

And looking into her dear eyes I saw sweet prophecy of happy days to come.

Broken English.

English is said to be one of the most difficult languages in the world for a foreigner to learn. The verbs and prepositions are particularly puzzling. A professor in an eastern college tells of the troubles of a Frenchman with the verb "to break." "I begin to understand your language better," said my friend M. de L. to me, "but your verbs trouble me still. You mix them up so with prepositions. I saw your friend Mrs. S. just now. She says she intends to break down her school earlier than usual. Am I right there?"

"Break up her school, she must have said."

"Oh, yes. I remember; break up school."

"Why does she do that?" I asked.

"Because her health is broken into."

"Broken down."

"Broken down? Oh, yes. And indeed, since the fever has broken up in her town."

"Broken out. Will she leave her house alone?"

"No. She is afraid it will be broken—broken—how do I say that?"

"Broken into."

"Gee only. It is what I meant to say."

"Is her son to be married soon?"

"No. That engagement is broken—broken."

"Broken off? Ah, I had not heard."

"She is very worried about it. He son only broke the news down to her last week. Am I right?"

catelny and in the center six daude-lion stones.

"Titch man, poor man, beggar man, chief, doctor, lawyer!"—chanted Hallie, bending over them. "Tell my fortune, dandelions, I pray you." She puffed out her pretty red lips and blew desperately at each one, but their time was not yet ended. They refused to be blown away. Laughing, she went over to the catelny corner and sat down on a stone.

"Tell me about it, Dan," she commanded, beginning to gather the scarlet blossoms.

"Many years ago a good deacon owned a gold mine," I began, looking down at her gloomily, "and in the foolishness of his heart he thought the yield would never grow less. He said: 'I will build me a castle such as this country has never beheld.' So his workers laid these foundations and built these walls. Then one day the deacon went to his mine, but there was no more gold. His castle was never completed; his fountains never splashed in the sunlight nor did his electric lights ever shine down on the town below. He died, but his folly remains. It has many applications. You, Hallie, are squandering the gold of an honest man's love. You are building for yourself a castle of fame. Beware, lest it crumble in ruins about your feet."

"You are tragic tonight, Dan," she remarked as she finished her bright hued crown and placed it on her dark hair.

"The sun is setting," I said, turning angrily away from her beauty. "You have no business to be working among men anyway. You are too pretty."

It was a scornful glance she threw back at me as she climbed the rock pile to look toward the west.

"I didn't think that of you," she said quietly, but her tone made me flush with shame.

"Forgive me, Hallie," I cried, springing up beside her. "I don't know what I'm saying."

"Dear old Dan," she whispered, with a half sob, "don't forget me quite when I'm gone."

Forget her! The sun disappeared behind the fringe of pines, and the cathedral bell began to ring slowly, each chiming a knell to my dead hopes. Hallie shivered.

"We had better go. It will be dark now when we get back."

I pleaded for five minutes more so that I might say my real goodby to scarlet crowned, red lipped, misty eyed Hallie; then, hand in hand, we went down the hill, along the country road, through lovers' lane and back to the town again.

It was summer when Hallie went away, and it was summer again when she came back. One evening I was passing the house which she had gloried for so short a time, when her aunt beckoned to me.

"Go to the east porch," she whispered as I went up the walk.

I thought of the time Hallie had shown me her castle from the east porch, and my heart was like lead as I went round the house and looked up to see—Hallie! Not round and rosy as she had been, but white, with great eyes unnaturally bright; Hallie, with her pale lips trembling and her thin little arms outstretched toward me.

You, Hallie, are squandering the gold of an honest man's love. You are building for yourself a castle of fame. Beware, lest it crumble in ruins about your feet."

"You are tragic tonight, Dan," she remarked as she finished her bright hued crown and placed it on her dark hair.

"The sun is setting," I said, turning angrily away from her beauty. "You have no business to be working among men anyway. You are too pretty."

It was a scornful glance she threw back at me as she climbed the rock pile to look toward the west.

"I didn't think that of you," she said quietly, but her tone made me flush with shame.

"Forgive me, Hallie," I cried, springing up beside her. "I don't know what I'm saying."

"Dear old Dan," she whispered, with a half sob, "don't forget me quite when I'm gone."

Forget her! The sun disappeared behind the fringe of pines, and the cathedral bell began to ring slowly, each chiming a knell to my dead hopes. Hallie shivered.

"We had better go. It will be dark now when we get back."

I pleaded for five minutes more so that I might say my real goodby to scarlet crowned, red lipped, misty eyed Hallie; then, hand in hand, we went down the hill, along the country road, through lovers' lane and back to the town again.

It was summer when Hallie went away, and it was summer again when she came back. One evening I was passing the house which she had gloried for so short a time, when her aunt beckoned to me.

"Go to the east porch," she whispered as I went up the walk.

I thought of the time Hallie had shown me her castle from the east porch, and my heart was like lead as I went round the house and looked up to see—Hallie! Not round and rosy as she had been, but white, with great eyes unnaturally bright; Hallie, with her pale lips trembling and her thin little arms outstretched toward me.

"What have they done to my darling?" I cried hoarsely as I sprang forward.

"I'm tired, Dan," she whispered, laying her dear head on my shoulder. "You said no one could serve two masters, and I have failed in serving one. I went out one stormy night to get details of a horrible murder case. I caught cold and couldn't seem to get over it. They said I must come back to California. And, Dan, I was glad, for California held you. My castle has fallen, as you said it might, but I don't seem to care."

"Hallie," I answered joyously, "love is better than fame and quietness far more to be desired than great riches. After you left I bought the pear orchard, and often have I sat among the castle ruins longing for my little girl. Tomorrow I will begin to build our house, and when it is finished I shall take you there. The pure winds and the balm of the pines will give you back your health. Oh, Hallie, Hallie!"

And looking into her dear eyes I saw sweet prophecy of happy days to come.

Broken English.

English is said to be one of the most difficult languages in the world for a foreigner to learn. The verbs and prepositions are particularly puzzling. A professor in an eastern college tells of the troubles of a Frenchman with the verb "to break." "I begin to understand your language better," said my friend M. de L. to me, "but your verbs trouble me still. You mix them up so with prepositions. I saw your friend Mrs. S. just now. She says she intends to break down her school earlier than usual. Am I right there?"

"Break up her school, she must have said."

"Oh, yes. I remember; break up school."

"Why does she do that?" I asked.

"Because her health is broken into."

"Broken down."

"Broken down? Oh, yes. And indeed, since the fever has broken up in her town."

"Broken out. Will she leave her house alone?"

"No. She is afraid it will be broken—broken—how do I say that?"

"Broken into."

"Gee only. It is what I meant to say."

"Is her son to be married soon?"

"No. That engagement is broken—broken."

"Broken off? Ah, I had not heard."

catelny and in the center six daude-lion stones.

"Titch man, poor man, beggar man, chief, doctor, lawyer!"—chanted Hallie, bending over them. "Tell my fortune, dandelions, I pray you." She puffed out her pretty red lips and blew desperately at each one, but their time was not yet ended. They refused to be blown away. Laughing, she went over to the catelny corner and sat down on a stone.

"Tell me about it, Dan," she commanded, beginning to gather the scarlet blossoms.

"Many years ago a good deacon owned a gold mine," I began, looking down at her gloomily, "and in the foolishness of his heart he thought the yield would never grow less. He said: 'I will build me a castle such as this country has never beheld.' So his workers laid these foundations and built these walls. Then one day the deacon went to his mine, but there was no more gold. His castle was never completed; his fountains never splashed in the sunlight nor did his electric lights ever shine down on the town below. He died, but his folly remains. It has many applications. The Work Ahead FOR THE Coming Congress

THE opening of congress gives the country a new topic of discussion, and signs are not lacking that the coming session will be in many respects a lively one. Although the Republicans have a large majority in both branches of congress, there is a prospect that matters will come up for consideration upon which the members of the majority party are not wholly agreed, so that there will be a chance for the development of new factional alignments and unprecedented political situations. New issues have recently come to the front in respect to which party lines have not been strictly drawn. Among the topics which will be uppermost in debate will be railroad rate legislation, the work of constructing the Panama canal, federal supervision of insurance companies, tariff revision, limitation of representation from southern states on account of alleged suppression of the colored vote, admission of new states and matters connected with the insular possessions of the United States. The leading place will be taken by the subject of railroad rate legislation. The house of representatives passed a bill on this subject last winter, but the senate adjourned without taking action on it. This being a new congress, the matter must be taken up again from the beginning, and it is the plan of the advocates of railroad rate legislation in the house to pass a new bill on the same lines as that of the last session, but somewhat more explicit. They hope to get this bill through early in the session and thus give the senate no excuse for inaction on the ground of insufficient time to consider the matter.

The Fifty-ninth congress is composed largely of old members—old, that is to say, in the sense of having already seen congressional service. There are 336 men in the house of representatives, and 200 of these, or 75 per cent, have occupied seats in the chamber before. The percentage in the last congress was 60. Fifteen states are represented in the Fifty-ninth congress by the same men who represented them in the Fifty-eighth congress. Among the new men in the senate are James A. Hemenway of Indiana, Frank B. Brandegee of Connecticut and Robert Marion La Follette of Wisconsin. Mr. Hemenway took the seat vacated by Senator Fairbanks when he became vice president. The new member from Indiana is regarded as one of the ablest legislators at Washington and has the advantage of a long and busy session in the house of representatives to aid him in becoming a leading figure among the senators. Senator Brandegee, who succeeds the late Senator Orville H. Platt, has also served in the house. He has the distinction of being the youngest member of the new senate, and, as he has quite a reputation as an orator, is expected to become a figure on the floor of the senate chamber. Another new senator from New England is W. Murray Crane.

Speaker Cannon is likely to be the same dominant figure in the house of representatives of the Fifty-ninth congress that he was in the Fifty-eighth. Though he prefers to be considered an "easy boss," his rule over the house is none the less firm. He often carries his points without creating any ill feeling because of his love of humor and command of wit and homely illustrations. One of the questions on which Speaker Cannon differs from some of his Republican colleagues is that of the tariff. He does not believe in revision. "I am not in favor of banging the country up by the tail," was the way he put it in referring to the subject recently. Asked to explain his views on this head more fully he described the disturbances in industry which he thought would follow any efforts in the direction of tariff revision and added: "We need to swing doors by the tail when we were boys. It must have been a very uncomfortable sensation for the dog. It would be just as uncomfortable a sensation for this great country, and, by Jove, I am not one to sit quietly by and see it attempted."

A new member of the house who at the same time is a member of the senate, is Warren K. Gorman, of Oregon, who, after years of absence, has been returned to congress from Ohio.

AUGUST BELMONT'S LONG ISLAND RESIDENCE.

Although he is the owner of a choice of homes, August Belmont, the financial agent of the Rothschilds in America, prefers an old fashioned and rather unpretentious frame dwelling, roomy and exceedingly comfortable, but with slight claim to architectural beauty, which is situated at Hempstead, a quiet Long Island village. It is near the Belmont park race course, and Mr. Belmont's stables afford him abundant relaxation from the cares of business.

They Had Something To Be Thankful For

THE man was a philosopher. Nay, more; he was a Christian. He had been dispossessed that day, and those of his household goods which the pawnbroker had not taken were piled up in the street. It was a bleak November day and Thanksgiving. He sat upon a dilapidated old sofa in the midst of his remaining effects. His wife stood near him, wringing her hands and weeping.

"Don't carry on so, dear," he pleaded. "It isn't so bad as it might be."

"How could it be any worse?" she sobbed. "We are in the street, with nothing to eat, no fire to warm us and no shelter over our heads. How could it be worse?" And she threw herself down beside him.

"Yes, yes; I know, dear," he urged soothingly as he put his arms about her and patted her softly on the shoulder. "I know what you say is true; but—but, dear, think a moment. We have something to be thankful for. We don't have to pay any rent here."—Judge.

Much In A Name.

In a little village in Virginia there lived a family named Ransom. They were not pious people, and they never went to church. Once, however, during a revival, the family was prevailed upon to attend the preaching. When they made their reluctant and tardy appearance the services had begun, and they had scarcely taken their seats when the minister gave out the first hymn, reading it somewhat thus: "Return, ye ransomed sinners, home."

"All right!" cried the head of the Ransoms, getting up in a rage and clapping his hat on his head. "Come along, old woman and gals; we'll go home fast enough! Everybody in the old church knows we didn't want to come!"—New York Times.

Rejected the Offer.

On a bitterly cold morning a lady, dressed splendidly in furs, surveyed with stern disapproval a wagon which had been waiting a long while for a load. The horses looked sadly in need of a covering, and at last the lady said to the driver:

"Why don't you put something over your horses this cold day?"

"Because, lady, the firm don't supply me with blankets for horses."

"Then you should cover the poor things with your coat."

"All right, ma'am. You gimme your seakink coat for this horse, and I'll put my overcoat on t'other."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Jolly Sports.

"Goin' to shoot this mornin'?"

"No. Fact is I'm beginnin' to think shootin' is rather an effeminate amusement."

"Goin' around the links?"

"My dear chap, that's one worse!"

"What are you goin' to do then?"

"Well, fact is I promised to arrange the flowers for the dinner table tonight. That ought to be rather sport, what?"

"Good! I'll come and help you."—Punch.

'Twas Well That Perry Had Asked His Father

"PAPA," asked little Perry, "do you think you'd like a magic lantern for a Christmas present from me this year?"

"Well, no. I don't really care for a magic lantern."

"I wonder if mamma would like one?"

"No, I'm quite sure she wouldn't. I think I heard her say once that she didn't care for magic lanterns."

"But I'll bet you grandma'd be glad to get one."

"Oh, no. She told me once that she didn't like magic lanterns at all. I certainly wouldn't get her such a thing as that for a Christmas present if I were you."

"I know what I'll do. I'll get a magic lantern for the baby. I bet she'll be tickled with it anyway."

"What! A little baby six months old? Why, she wouldn't know the difference between a magic lantern and a female seminary!"

The boy's chin dropped forward upon his breast, and he seemed to be sorely discouraged.

"I suppose," his father said at length, "that I oughtn't to tell you before Christmas comes, but I've bought a magic lantern for you."

"Have you, honest? Gee! I'm glad I didn't go and buy one for anybody before askin' you about it!"—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Modern Dead Language.

Professor Losker, teacher of Latin, talked laboriously to his class of listless young men.

"When a man kills himself," he droned, "it is called suicide. An individual who assassinates a king is a regicide, and he who slays his mother is guilty of matricide. Homicide is a familiar term and of course refers to the killing of one human being by another. Then we have fratricide, the murder of a brother, and infanticide, a crime readily suggested by the name. The husband who slays his wife is an uxoricide, and—"

Throughout the entire elucidation of this lecture Clarence McClinnock dozed peacefully. His hands were clasped, a restless smile played on his sunny features and his head nodded fitfully. Now sonorous snores emanated from the student and caused the professor to halt in his discourse.

"Mr. McClinnock," roared the instructor, who had in mind the word patricide, "a son seizes an iron bar and kills his father. You may name the term applied to such a death."

Clarence rose with difficulty, blinked stupidly and gently restored to place his straying locks of hair. Suddenly his eyes brightened and he exclaimed:

"A case of son stroke, sir!"—Philadelphia North American.

Dr. Douglas Hyde AND THE Gaelic Revival

THE revival of a dead language is usually no mean task. Those who are seeking to revitalize the ancient Gaelic tongue believe that it is not yet so dead as to make this an impossibility. The arrival in America of Dr. Douglas Hyde, the leading exponent of the movement, has attracted special attention to its aims. Much has already been accomplished in this direction through the enthusiasm of Dr. Hyde and the work of the organizations which have come into existence partly as a result of his exertions. Dr. Hyde is the son of a Protestant clergyman, the Rev. Arthur Hyde, and he himself has studied theology, but instead of preaching the gospel has devoted himself to literature and scholarship and to the work of convincing the Irish people and those in other countries of Irish descent of the value of the tongue in which their forefathers spoke.

Dr. Hyde was educated at Trinity college, Dublin, where in 1834 he took the degree of bachelor of arts after an exceptionally brilliant undergraduate career and where he has since taken additional degrees. Although he won honors in German, French and Italian, it was the Celtic language which most attracted him, and on graduation, instead of making the tour of the continent usually taken by young men of his social position, he traveled extensively in his native province, making a study of the ancient Irish tales, songs and folklore of Connaught. In this way he was drawn into relations of intimacy with the Irish peasantry and came to realize more than ever before the qualities for the expression of emotion and tenderness possessed by the language of the past. In 1839 he published a book of tales in the ancient tongue, entitled "Leabhar Sgeulachta." The praise this received from students of the Gaelic language encouraged him to write "Beside the Fire; Folklore of the Irish Celts," "The Love Songs of Connaught," "Story of Early Irish Literature," "Medieval Tales From the Irish" and other works. Some of these books have gone through several editions. In order to encourage the use of the old language of Ireland in both writing and speaking he has written dramas in Gaelic and taken parts in them himself when presented on the stage. Personally he is recognized as a man of great versatility of talent, for he is poet, playwright, critic, actor, divinity student, orator, journalist, historian, linguist, translator, professor, archaeologist, lecturer and folklorist.

Dr. Hyde is making a tour of the United States and speaking in colleges and before learned societies of various kinds. Owing in large degree to his efforts the movement for the revival of the Gaelic language in Ireland now shows some surprising results. There are two main groups of the Celtic tongue—the Celtic, represented by the Celtic speech of Wales and Brittany, and the Gaelic, formerly more widely spoken, but now represented by the Celtic speech of Ireland, Scotland and the Isle of Man. Scotland, with a population of 4,500,000, has not in the mainland or adjacent islands more than 300,000 persons who speak or understand Gaelic. In Ireland, when the census of 1900 was taken, it was found that out of a population of about 4,500,000 not more than 700,000 could speak Gaelic. This was a decline of 10,000 in ten years. The decline was due in part to the large emigration from the western province, the last foothold of the Gaelic in Ireland. Since then the current has turned. A few years ago most of those who spoke Gaelic in Ireland could neither read it nor write it. The system of education ignored it, and parents, anxious that their children should get on in the world, banished it from their homes. The Gaelic league, of which Dr. Hyde was the first president, has done much to change these conditions. It employs traveling teachers and in many ways encourages the use of the ancient language both in conversation and literature. Interest in the movement has extended to the United States and even to South America. The number of schools in which the Gaelic language is taught has advanced from 105 in 1850 to over 3,000 in 1905, and those who can read, speak and write Gaelic is thus constantly increasing.

Sound to Rise.

Deafness Cannot be Cured.

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Unlikely. An old Virginia negro sold a dog for $3 and warranted the canine to steal chickens. It was not long before the dog was returned with the remark, "He was a fraud."

"Was de chickens cooked?" inquired the old man.

"No," replied the negro who had purchased the wonder.

"Well, dat is de only kind of chickens he will go after. Do you suppose for a moment I would sell a dog for $3 who would steal live chickens?"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Take Courage!

If you are naturally not as strong as your more fortunate sisters, and for this reason experience dread rather than joy at the prospect of becoming a mother, take courage and assurance from this fact: Mother's Friend is meant for you, and by its use you may pass through that glorious martyrdom which is yours by divine right with no more discomfort than that experienced by those who by nature are possibly more adapted for the role of motherhood.

Brand Whitlock, Novelist and Mayor of Toledo

ONE of the unique features of the recent political campaign was the candidacy of Brand Whitlock for mayor of Toledo, O., the city made famous by a previous mayor, the late Samuel Milton Jones, popularly and affectionately known as "Golden Rule" Jones. It was a striking confirmation of the dead man's worth and the vitality of the principles he advocated that Whitlock, who stood as the disciple and political heir of Mr. Jones, was elected.

There is no doubt that Sam Jones living exercised a very palpable and potent influence in his municipality, an influence which in time spread widely, passing far beyond the confines of Ohio and in time becoming national. It is equally true that the influence of Sam Jones dead is still a potent factor in Toledo politics. It is the survival of his influence that has elected Brand Whitlock.

During Jones' fatal illness his condition was bulletined on the Toledo Stock Exchange. When he rallied, the prices of local speculative paper weakened, and when he was reported to be feebler there was a recovery in those stocks. When he died, there was a boom. That meant that "Golden Rule" Jones had stood in the way of certain speculative projects which would now go through.

Sam Jones was without a party. He had absolutely no organization at his command to help him maintain his unyielding opposition to corporate greed and resistance to municipal corruption. His was a one man rule, but it was tempered by an individuality whose creed was liberty of thought and action, so long as it wrought no hardship to his fellow man. That was the keynote of his manhood and the weapon that made him the strong ally of the well disposed and the terror of evil doers.

The secret of Jones' power was not in his professions, but in his ability to convince. One might disagree with him, find him illogical, scout at his conclusions, but no man might doubt him. Although the opposition to Jones never succeeded in understanding the man, it never failed to recognize his integrity. Conscienceless men misunderstood him in the same way that they did the Golden Rule, but they were compelled to admit his honesty.

When the Golden Rule mayor was no more, the ringsters, political and corporate, took courage. They crowded in to the lobby of the city council and once more laid their plans to capture everything in sight, but they had not reckoned on the well established Jones influence, the principle which had survived, although its champion had passed into the great beyond. The men who had been convinced by Jones came to the rescue and the corruptionists were defeated. The Golden Rule worked.

Then the opposition appealed from what it denominated "the mob" to the people. Without a leader the issue was carried into the next election, and the men who had listened to Jones and had been convinced went to the polls and voted as he would have had them vote. The fact was made patent that Toledo was still dominated by the spirit that had been evoked by the dead mayor. That campaign had another result—it developed a leader, Brand Whitlock.

To the general public he is known as a novelist, a writer who has produced fiction that has stood the test. Toledo has a more intimate knowledge of him. It knows him as a man, as the friend of "Golden Rule" Jones, the one he loved best and trusted most implicitly.

Brand Whitlock is not another Sam Jones. There is not in all America another individual who is qualified to lay claim to that distinction. Mr. Whitlock has never attempted it, and his ways are not those of the servile imitator. He is as clean handed, as true to himself, as lefty in his ideals as was Sam Jones, but he has none of the peculiarities of temperament which distinguished the dead man.

Mr. Whitlock is another instance of the American novelist who has written himself into political preferment. His career has been varied. Before the recent campaign he was known principally outside of Toledo as the author of a stirring political novel entitled "The Thirteenth District." He had written and published much other matter, good, bad and indifferent, but the popularity of "The Thirteenth District" was unquestionable. There was something in it that attracted almost every one who read it. As keen and impartial a literary judge as William Dean Howells, who read it in manuscript, pronounced it the best political story ever produced in the United States.

Brand Whitlock was born at Urbana, O., March 4, 1869. He is the son of a minister, the Rev. Elias D. Whitlock. He was educated in the public schools of his native town and chose the legal profession, being admitted to the bar in 1894. The following year he removed to Illinois, settling first at Springfield, where he filled a position in the office of the secretary of state during the administration of the late John P. Altgeld. While he was at Springfield Mr. Whitlock met Miss Ella Brainerd, a niece of Senator John M. Palmer, and after a brief courtship they were married.

Even in those early days of his career Whitlock seemed inclined to commingle law, literature and politics in about equal proportions. He showed so much fitness for political writing that he was given a position on the staff of the Chicago Herald. During two sessions of the Illinois legislature he had charge of the Springfield bureau of that paper, and in the intervals wrote political articles for the editorial page. Besides this, he produced an immense amount of literary ephemera, some of which deserved a better fate. Some of his stories published in the Sunday papers had the true literary distinction and attracted considerable attention. The fashion of making books out of short stories had not attained its present vogue or it is likely that some of these early efforts would have been collected and published in that form.

When Mr. Whitlock removed to Toledo to become a member of the law firm of Cole, Whitlock & Milroy his political leanings again assumed the lead.

He could not suppress his old time fondness for the bustle and uncertainty of a campaign, and almost before he realized it he was in the midst of the struggle, working heart and soul for the election of Mr. Jones. From the first he was a willing captive to the amazing sincerity and directness of the Golden Rule philosopher's methods. He had seen so much of the deviousness and insincerity of public life, his opportunity to do so had been so unlimited, that he was fascinated by the absolute guilelessness of Jones' tactics.

Whitlock labored so earnestly for Jones' election that before the campaign was ended he had become second only to the candidate in point of prominence. Even then it was predicted, truly that he would some time become the leader of the movement. Long before the death of Mr. Jones his able lieutenant had won not only the supreme confidence of his chief, but that of the public which supported him.

Nevertheless, when the nomination was offered to him Brand Whitlock hesitated. It was only when he realized the peril that might follow his failure to respond that he consented. Once having committed himself, he entered the arena with a confidence inspired by the merit of his cause and with a determination that was irresistible.

ADVANTAGES OF BALDNESS.

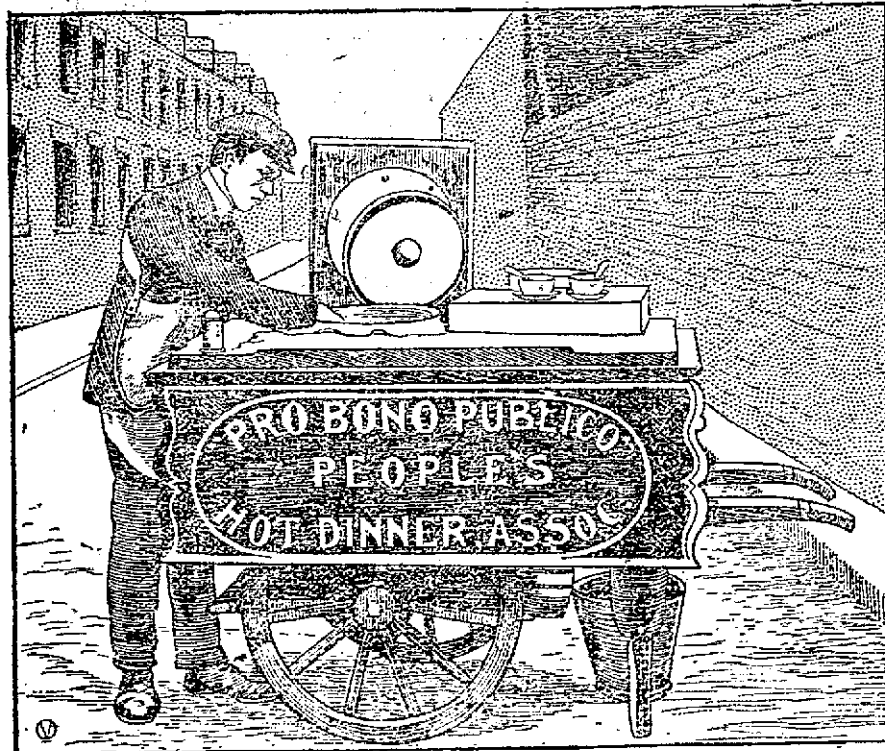

There are many advantages accruing even from bald heads. It has been pointed out by an eminent doctor that baldheaded men never suffer from consumption and that a tendency to baldness is an assurance that the dreaded scourge will pass over him. To argue that a man's hair is indicative of his immunity from disease does not seem reasonable at first, but the doctor declares that in the five years during which he seriously noted the nature of the patient's hair not a single case of consumption occurred among those with scanty hair. He had under treatment more than 600 cases, and he makes the further statement that in a census of more than 5,000 tuberculosis cases he failed to discover a single sufferer who was bald.

LIBERTY AND HER TORCH.

The light in the torch of the statue of Liberty at the entrance to New York harbor is a constant source of annoyance to seafaring men. It is not an official light, but it is often mistaken for one. Some time ago there was a demand that the light should be abolished, but it was ignored for sentimental reasons. The statue is one of the first things to greet the eye on the homeward passage and is always hailed with marked manifestations of patriotism.

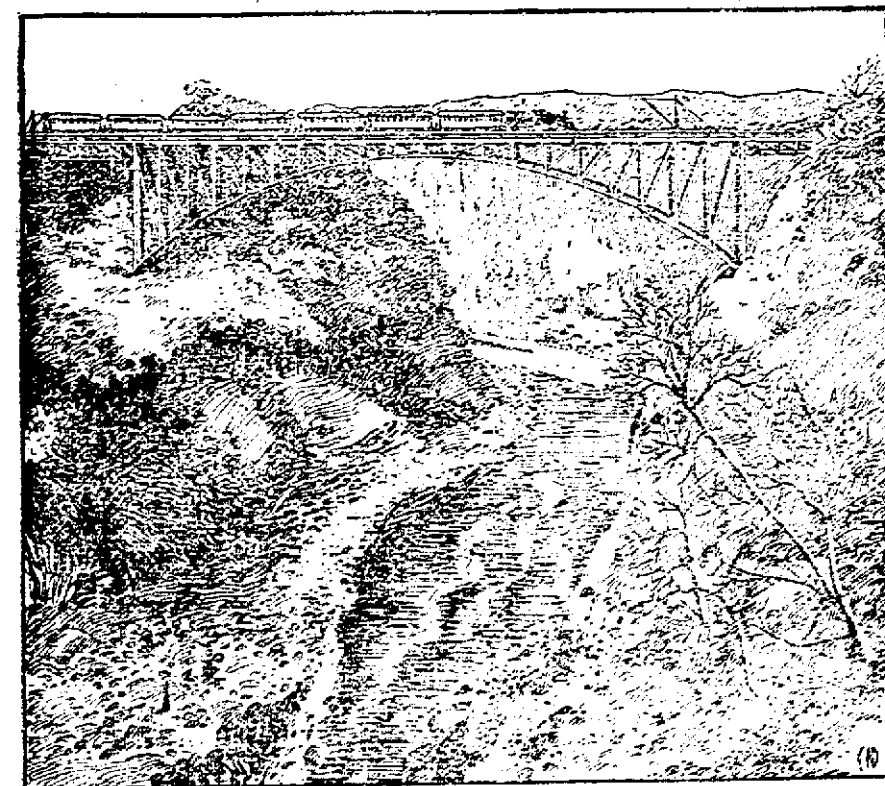

Some Happenings of the World In Pictures

A PORTABLE SOUP TUREEN IN LONDON.

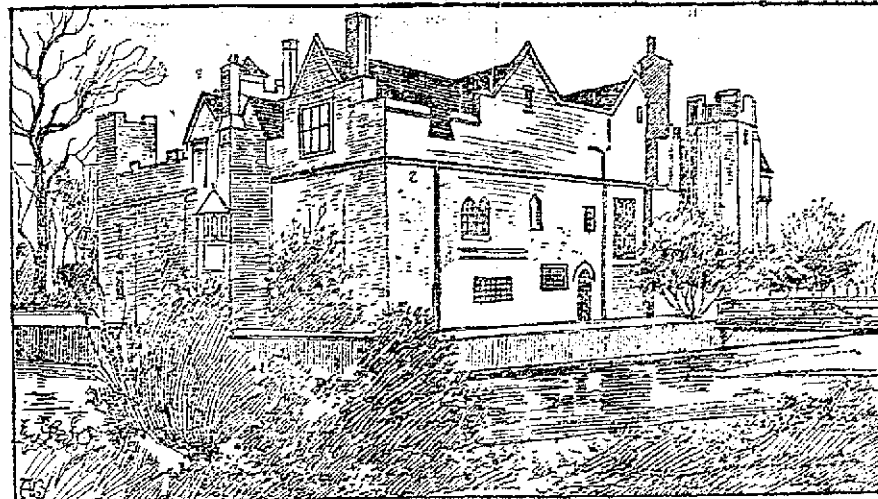

Hundreds of portable soup tureens like the one herewith illustrated have been brought into service by an association organized for charitable purposes in the Hammersmith district of London. The object is to supply all who may be in need of immediate sustenance with hot soup and bread at the cost of a penny. The scheme became so popular at once that the demand could not be supplied and the number of soup barrows was increased by the hundred. It has already been demonstrated that the association will be kept active in the administration of its charity.

FIRST TRAIN TO CROSS THE VICTORIA FALLS BRIDGE.

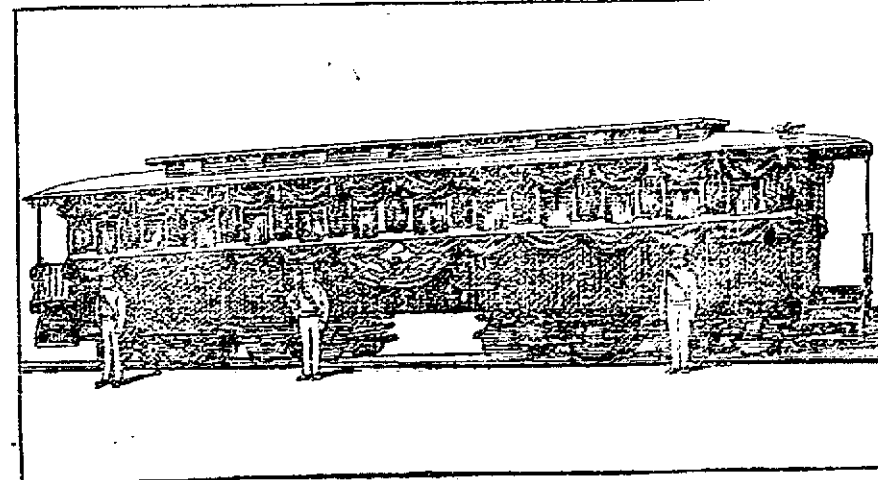

The great bridge over the Victoria falls on the Zambesi river, South Africa, shown in the cut, was recently opened for traffic. The first train that crossed over had among its passengers Professor George H. Darwin, son of the great evolutionist, and the members of the British association. When the train was midway on the bridge the engine was stopped and Professor Darwin made the dedication speech. This bridge has been under construction for several years and is one of the most wonderful feats of engineering ever attempted.

ONE OF WILLIAM WALDORF ASTOR'S CASTLES.

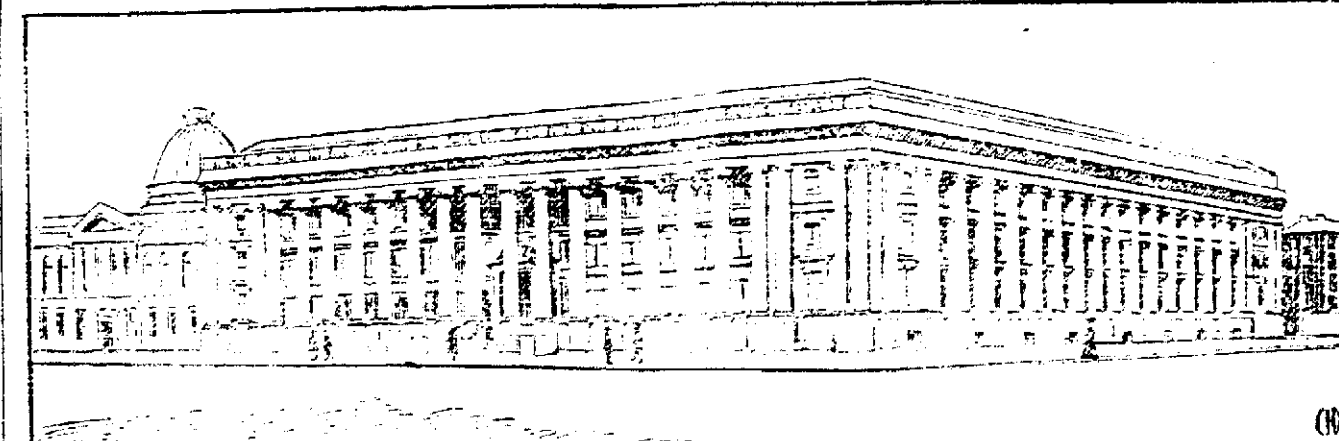

Hever castle, shown in the cut, has been acquired by William Waldorf Astor and is being modernized for his occupancy. It is one of the most historic residences in England and is situated in Kent. It was originally a stronghold as well as a residence and was at one period of her life the home of Anne Boleyn. After her execution Henry VIII, who had confiscated the property, gave it to Anne of Cleves, and she lived there until her death.

A NEGLECTED RELIC OF THE GREAT EMANCIPATOR.

The car herewith pictured was once used by President Lincoln in his official trips about the country. It was also used as his funeral car, and the cut is from a photograph taken as it stood on the lake front at Chicago while on its melancholy journey to Springfield, where the body of Lincoln found a final resting place. At the present time the car stands in a rusty and unused sleighrack at Joliet, Ill., and is utterly neglected.

PLAN FOR THE BROOKLYN MUNICIPAL BUILDING.

The picture of this four story structure is taken from a plan for a new municipal building for Brooklyn recently submitted to the New York board of estimate and expenditure of at least $1,000,000. The facade is supposed to be in the style of the old city hall, and the building is to be a landmark in the city. In case the plan should be accepted by the board the city will be obliged to acquire more land, for the present municipality site is too small.

CROSSING THE OCEAN IN A ROWBOAT.

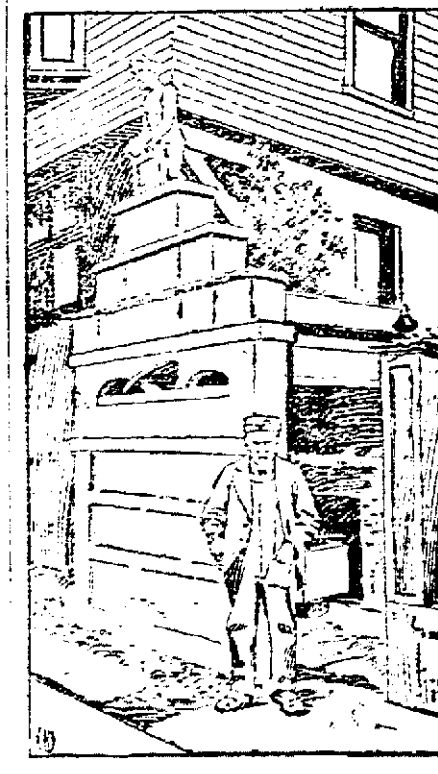

The picture shows the small boat in which an American named Nordini recently crossed the ocean and landed at Kiel, Germany. The craft is a cross between an Icelandic kayak and the racing shell used by university crews. No sail was used in the voyage, and the two bladed paddle shown in the cut was the only means of propulsion. During the several weeks of the voyage Nordini subsisted on the condensed vegetable food with which the boat was ballasted when she left port. The daring navigator was the recipient of much attention at Kiel.

DOLLS AS EDUCATORS.

A novel idea has been realized in Paris by M. Leo Claretie, who, besides being an eminent educationist, is an ardent advocate of rendering education attractive. His system of the history of France in dressed dolls is to be placed on public exhibition as an object lesson in its capabilities. Even the prehistoric periods, whose life can only be known on the testimony of the rocks, are represented. Within the pale of history every age is represented by its leading figures, as Gaul, pre-Roman, Roman and Frankish. Then come the crusades, the English wars, the later middle ages, the early modern period, and so on to the third republic.

REMARKABLE STATUE OF SATAN.

The curious statue herewith illustrated was set up in the street near his dwelling by an eccentric German citizen of Detroit. It is dedicated to Satan and is dominated by a figure of the father of lies. It is a fair example of modern sculpture, but the city authorities object to its presence in a public thoroughfare, and it will be removed. The Detroit Turnverein recently visited the statue in a body and drank toasts to owner and sculptor.

AMUSEMENTS

GRACE VAN STUDDIFORD.
Local theatre-goers are soon to see and hear beautiful Grace Van Studdiford, the much-heralded star, whose beauty is the delight of all. The famous diva will appear at the Auditorium Thursday evening in "Lady Teazle." "Lady Teazle" is a musical version of Sheridan's "School for Scandal." The new piece is by John Kendrick Bangs, and Roderick Penfield and the music is by A. Baldwin Sloane. Miss Van Studdiford's associate players are said to constitute the most pretentious singing organization of the day. The company is Owen Davis dramatized it; Tim Murphy produced and acts it. The ownership has become a more precious object since the great success of the play and the case promises to be one of the hardest fought of the year in the New York courts.

SAN TOY.
In undertaking a tour which reaches from New York City to San Francisco, and then through the south, John C. Fisher's "San Toy" company will cover something like 22,000 miles on the trip. At first thought the most pretentious singing organization of the day. The company is under the direction of S. S. and Leo Shubert, managers of the Casino, Lyric and Princess theatres, New York. Ernest Wall and wife, formerly Miss Grace Purcell of this city are members of the company. Seats on sale Tuesday morning.

TIM MURPHY.
It is not often that a group of people go to law to get an actor to do a play. Nevertheless that's just what happened to Tim Murphy when he set out to produce "A Corner in Coffee." Several people claimed the rights but all wanted Mr. Murphy to act the comedy. They couldn't agree among themselves on any other point for the players, but when it is known that Mr. Fisher always provides special train service for his people, traveling has no terrors for them. These "San Toy" specials will consist of six cars, three for the exclusive use of the members of the company and the other three for the baggage and the scenery.

CRESTON CLARKE.
It has been known for some time that a date has been arranged for a visit to this city by Creston Clarke in his big artistic and financial success of last season "Beaucaire," the beautiful Booth Tarkington comedy romance but the definite announce-except this determination that the comedians should act the play, so to facilitate this all claimants drew up a deed of trust, all royalties from the production of "A Corner in Coffee" are paid to a trustee and he holds them until the comedians decide who really owns the right. Mr. Murphy is to act Elijah D. Thelton in "A Corner in Coffee" at the Auditorium. Who do you think the dramatic rights belong to? The Rev. Cyrus Towns and Biddle wrote the story. "San Toy" is by G. W. Dillingham, just as the "San Toy" is by G. W. Dillingham.

DUKE OF KILLICRANKIE.
The Duke of Killicrankie which

Scene From "My Wife's Family," Thursday, Auditorium.

was admitted to be the Blue Ribbon comedy of the last season's Empire theatre productions, will be at the Auditorium soon. This attraction will appeal to the elite theatre patrons. Miss Rose Coghlan is the stellar lady of the cast, all of whom are the select of high class players. The original equipment will be used and an ensemble offered which will favorably compare with the London and New York presentations.

WOMAN IN THE CASE.
Blanche Walsh, the charming emotional actress, appeared at the Auditorium last night before a large audience in her latest and greatest success, "The Woman in the Case," written by Clyde Fitch, author of "The Climbers." The production of the play was faultless, the production being one of the very best of the season. The company played at the Weller in Zanesville tonight.

TONIGHT AT TAYLOR HALL.
At Taylor Hall tonight Dr. Albert C. Derr gives the last of his popular entertainments of moving pictures and travel scenes. Two hundred and fifty finely colored views will be shown. Being one of the popular Saturday night entertainments the admission will be 10 cents to all parts of the house. Come early and get a good seat.

AT TAYLOR HALL DEC. 8.
An entertainment of more than ordinary merit is announced to be given in Taylor Hall next Friday evening, December 8, by the following artists: Prof. Gabriel Tidd, concert whistler; Daniel E. Camp, reader and impersonator.

Mr. Reynolds, baritone
Miss Mary Hentze, pianist.
Mrs. Ed Roe, sopranoist
Prof. Tidd traveled for two years with the Katherine Ridgeway concert company, which fact in itself is a strong testimonial as to his work. Mr. Daniel E. Camp of Centerburg, O., while not known to Newark, comes very highly recommended as a reader and impersonator. The other artists are too well known to need any introduction.

The admission price will be 25 cents. Seats may be reserved without extra charge at the Y. M. C. office, beginning Monday morning at 9 o'clock.

The Negative Pose.

If you cannot be chance.
On a lot of songs and dance
On P. to or Wagner or Elmer.
On it you can't think
In gibbly metaphysics.
Or daintily talk Botticelli—
In each time you bark
At it when it marks
At a long hair and high forehead dinner
You're not on by those
Of the negative pose.
Try the negative one—it's a winner.

It's worked in these ways:
Gaze on all native plays
And show no approving emotion;
Imperturbably sad eyes
And deep, passive sighs
All art from this side of the ocean;
Observe with wan smiles
America's styles
In building and in sculpture and letters,
And when you speak, why,
Distinctly imply
That the Zulus in taste are our betters.

Don't say much; 'tis best
To have a great
Just such and avoid explanations;
Look misanthropic
And all to a good
In the matter of mind decorations;
Who not your bias
Corruption and thoughtfulness mystic,
"That's gone Mr. Blank."
Of this and of being artistic."

NERVE TABLETS

Sergeant Orr's Letter

Nerve troubles are real. They lead to disastrous results. That may happen to any one. Zell Nerve Tablets feed starved nerves. That's why they restore perfect health. They build nerve strength. They tone up the nervo-spinal system and make rich red blood.

Read what Sergeant Orr, winner of the Sea Girt championship medal for rifle shooting, says about Zell Nerve Tablets:

NEWARK, Ohio, Sept. 15, 1905.

THE ZELL DRUG CO., Galion, Ohio.

Gentlemen:—I wish to express to you my appreciation of your valuable Nerve Remedy—Zell Nerve Tablets. When I began practicing for the annual State Shoot last summer, I was weak, nervous, and far from condition for such an ordeal. I decided on your remedy, the proper one to use in my case, and used it constantly during my practice and during the shoot, and was highly gratified to be able to win the championship of Ohio in this shoot, and to be selected as one of the contestants in the National Military Competition Shoot at Sea Girt.

My success I attribute largely to the use of your remedy and continued use of them up to and during the Sea Girt Shoot, and give it credit for assisting me very materially in the winning of the title which I now bear, the Champion Military Rifle Shot of the United States.

I regard your remedy as a most valuable one, and would advise any one needing a Nerve Remedy to at least give Zell Nerve Tablets a trial.

Very truly,
Sergeant CLARENCE E. ORR,
Company G, 7th Regiment Ohio National Guard, Newark, Ohio.

Huge Task.
It was a huge task, to undertake the cure of such a bad case of kidney disease, as that of C. F. Collier, of Cherokee, Ia., but Electric Bitters did it. He writes: "My kidneys were so far gone I could not sit on a chair without a cushion; and suffered from dreadful backache, headache and depression. In Electric Bitters, however, I found a cure and by them was restored to perfect health. I recommend this great tonic medicine to all with weak kidneys, liver or stomach. More than 1,000,000,000 pounds of prunes were consumed in the United States last year. If the cost of living continues to advance the frugal prune will come to be a boarding house luxury.

But little paper has been recently made from prunes; vegetable substances, such as wood, alfalfa and straw, are especially employed. But the use of furze, wild or cultivated, has not been thought of until recently.
